Teicoplanin 1% eye drops (preservative free)

St Paul's Eye Unit – Ophthalmology

What are teicoplanin eye drops used for?

Teicoplanin is an antibiotic. Teicoplanin eye drops treat bacterial eye infections.

How do I use my eye drops?

1. Please follow the instructions on the bottle label
2. Wash your hands before opening the bottle
3. Sit down and tilt your head back
4. Pull lower eyelid down and look up
5. Use your other hand to squeeze one drop into lower eyelid making sure the nozzle does not touch your eye, eyelashes or eyelid
6. Close your eye and press gently on the inner corner of the eye for 30-60 seconds to make sure the drop is fully absorbed.
7. Please leave at least five minutes before using other eye drops
8. If both eyes are affected, you will need a separate bottle of eye drops for each eye

How should I store my eye drops?

Teicoplanin eye drops should be stored in a fridge between 2-8°C

If your eye drops are left out of the fridge, please contact the hospital for further supply

How long will my eye drops last?

Teicoplanin eye drops are made in the hospital and expire 21 days after they are made.

Once a bottle of teicoplanin eye drops is opened, the eye drops expire after 24 hours – this means that each day, you will need a new bottle of teicoplanin eye drops, and any used bottles should be thrown away.

The expiry date will be written on the eye drop bottle label.

Where can I get supply of my eye drops?

Teicoplanin eye drops are only supplied by the hospital.

This is because teicoplanin eye drops are an unlicensed medicine made by the hospital.

Because this product has a short shelf life, you may need to return to the hospital to collect more eye drops.

How can I speak to someone if I have a problem with my eye drops or need further supply?

You can contact the ophthalmology pharmacists Monday-Friday 9-5pm if you have run out of your eye drops or if you have problems with the medication

You can email: ahn-tr.uveitis.liverpool@nhs.net

Or you can telephone: 0151 706 2000 and ask the operator to bleep 5141

At the weekend, please call the hospital pharmacy on 0151 706 2092 from 9am-4pm.

What does it mean if a medicine is unlicensed?

In the UK, medicines are checked to make sure they work and are safe. These checks are normally part of a clinical trial. The Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) gives a product licence to medicines which have passed these checks. The product licence, also called a market authorisation, will say which condition or conditions that medicine can be used to treat. An unlicensed medicine is a medicine which does not have a product licence. A medicine might be unlicensed for various reasons such as:

- Manufacturers may decide not to try to get new uses for a medicine added to the product license because it is very expensive to complete the necessary clinical trials.
- The number of people with a particular condition is too small to allow clinical trials to be completed.
- The medicine is still going through the licensing process, which can take some time.

How do I know these medicines are safe and will work?

Your prescribers will have considered all the options for treating your condition before deciding to give you an unlicensed medicine. The prescriber will have thought carefully about the best medicine for you and your condition. Prescribers have a lot of experience with medicines. They will have read specialist information about the unlicensed medicine and may have talked to other experts about your treatment.

What if I don't want to use an unlicensed medicine?

This is your choice to make. Talk it over with your prescriber. Tell them what you are worried about. They will be able to give you more information and advice about the medicine. Your prescriber will also be able to discuss alternative treatments with you and explain why they think this option is the best for you.
